

VISIT OF PRINC ALBERT TO CAPE 1867

The
James Hurrephreys
Collection

Photograph Album.

An album containing numerous photographs many of them of South African interest.

The photographs are mainly between 1860 - 1870 and in excellent condition.

The photographer was obviously a Naval person of high social standing who was at the Cape during the ~~period~~ 1867-1870.

There are several photographs dealing with the visit of HRH Prince Alfred, Duke of Edinburgh when the "Galatea" visited the Cape in 1867 - some of these were taken by the Duke himself.

There are a number of photographs of well known Cape personalities - Sir Walter Currie, Mrs Chiappini, Mr. v.d. Byl, the Myburgs, the Cloetes, etc.

A most interesting collection - and the photos of excellent standard.

SORROW ON THE SEA.

There is sorrow on the sea—it cannot be quiet.—Jer. xlix. 23.

I stood on the shore of the beautiful sea,
As the billows were roaring wild and free;
Ceased they came with unfeeling force,
Then backward turned in their restless course;
Ever and ever sounded their roar,
Framing and dashing against the shore;
Ever and ever they rose and fell,
With heaving and sighing and mighty swell;
And deep seemed calling aloud to deep,
Lest the murmuring waves should drop to sleep.
In summer and winter, by night and by day,
They' dead and sunshine holding their way;
Oh! when shall the ocean's troubled breast
Calmly and quietly sink into rest?
Oh! when shall the waves' wild murmuring cease,
And the mighty waters be hushed to peace?

It cannot be quiet—it cannot rest;
There must be heaving on ocean's breast;
The tide must ebb, and the tide must flow,
Whilst the changing seasons come and go.
Still from the depths of that hidden store
There are treasures tossed up along the shore;
Tossed by the billows—then seized again—
Carried away by the rushing main.
Oh, strangely glorious and beautiful sea!
Rounding far even mysteriously,
Why are thy billows still rolling on,
With their wild and sad and musical tone?
Why is there never repose for thee?
Why slumberest thou not, oh mighty sea?

Then the ocean's voice I seemed to hear,
Mournfully, solemnly—sounding near,
Like a wail sent up from the caverns below,
Fraught with dark memories of human woe,
Telling of loved ones buried there,
Of the dying shriek and the dying prayer;
Telling of hearts still watching in vain
For those who shall never come again;
Of the widow's groan, the orphan's cry,
And the mother's speechless agony.
Oh, no, the ocean can never rest
With such secrets hidden within its breast.
There is sorrow written upon the sea,
And dark and stormy its waves must be;
It cannot be quiet, it cannot sleep,
That dark, restless, and stormy deep.

But a day will come, a blessed day,
When earthly sorrow shall pass away,
When the hour of anguish shall turn to peace,
And even the roar of the waves shall cease.
Then out from its deepest and darkest bed,
Old ocean shall render up her dead,
And, freed from the weight of human woe,
Shall quietly sink in her last repose.
No sorrow shall ever be written there
On the depths of the sea or the hearts of men,
But heaven and earth renewed shall shine,
Still clothed in glory and light divine.
Then where shall the billows of ocean be?
Gone! for in heaven shall be "no more sea!"
To a bright and beautiful thing of earth,
That cannot share in the soul's "new birth";
'Tis a life of murmur and tossing and spray,
And at resting-time it must pass away.

But oh! thou glorious and beautiful sea,
There is health and joy and blessing in thee:
Solemnly, sweetly, I hear thy voice,
Bidding me weep and yet rejoice—
Weep for the loved ones buried beneath,
Rejoice in Him who has conquered death;
Weep for the sorrowing and tempt-tossed
Rejoice in Him who has saved the lost;
Weep for the sin, the sorrow, and strife,
And rejoice in the hope of eternal life.

[These lines were written in a friend's album by the late Captain M. A. S. Hare, of H.M.S. Exeter, some years since. He was a true Christian, living with his lame girdled and lamp-burning, ready to go at a moment's notice, at the call of his Master.]
